

OMWINDENERGY Europe 2014

October 8 – 9/10, 2014 in Düsseldorf

Partner country: France

Program online: www.omwindenergy.com.

OMWINDENERGY Europe facts:

The wind industry is booming worldwide – both onshore and offshore.

Experienced and specialized O&M companies have excellent growth opportunities around the world. But how do you make sure your company has what it takes to hold its own in the competitive market environment for the long term?

There are great opportunities for new companies in the wind service market, as well.

Competence in service and the ability to innovate are what really matters in the wind business. Do you already have what it takes?

Pressures to increase professionalization and decrease costs are changing the corporate landscape.

The spectrum of companies, services, and solutions is constantly diversifying. However, concentration processes and strategic partnerships are another answer to the challenges posed. How well are you positioned?

Skilled O&M workers are vital for a company's success.

How do you find and retain high-quality personnel? What innovative training tools do you use to train your staff continuously and cost-effectively in preparation for demanding work?

The winners are companies and service providers that have an offensive service strategy and find the best solutions for their situations.

Does that describe your company?

COMPOSITES EUROPE – European Trade Fair & Forum for Composites, Technology and Applications

7 – 9 October 2014, Düsseldorf Exhibition Centre

Ever larger, ever more performance: rotor blades soar thanks to lightweight construction

COMPOSITES EUROPE trade fair to show latest developments for wind power industry

An on-shore wind turbine built in Germany in 2013 has an average (hub) height of 117 metres, a rotor diameter of 95 metres and an output of 2,598 kW. All 23,645 installations currently active in Germany generate approximately 33,730 MW, which averages out to 1,427 kW per wind turbine. By way of comparison, the analogous cumulative figures for 2003 were 15,387 installations putting out about 14,609 MW or 949 kW on average. These figures, published by the German Wind Energy Association, show that both the number of installations and the capacity has increased, but they also indicate that a wind turbine built today is significantly larger and more powerful than those just ten years ago.

This massive advancement would have been unthinkable without the widespread use of lightweight materials such as fibre-reinforced composites. COMPOSITES EUROPE, taking place in Düsseldorf from 7 to 9 October, will showcase the sector's enormous potential. Its most renowned companies will be on hand to present their latest developments and materials solutions.

COMPOSITES EUROPE presents production solutions

After eight successful events, COMPOSITES EUROPE – in conjunction with the International AVK Conference – has become firmly established as the leading German trade fair event for fibre-reinforced plastics. Some 440 exhibitors from 25 nations are expected at the Düsseldorf Exhibition Centre from 7 to 9 October. COMPOSITES EUROPE will present a comprehensive overview of the entire composites spectrum. Automation of high-volume processes for manufacturing composites components will play a central role again this year. New lightweight construction concepts, materials and state-of-the-art production and automation solutions will be on display. COMPOSITES EUROPE is organised by trade fair organiser Reed Exhibitions in cooperation with the European industry association EuCIA, the German Federation for Reinforced Plastics AVK, the VDMA Forum Composite Technology and the international trade magazine Reinforced Plastics.
